From: Akio Nakamura <akionakamura@kchpr.com>
Subject: How's it going?

Simon,

How's it going? Haven't heard from you for quite some time.

I've been back in Tokyo for four months now. So far life's been fine to me. I am working for KCH Public Relations Company as a creative researcher. This company is quite young, but the officemates are really energetic. You've got to be here to feel their dynamic spirit. All people and things move around me at such a pace that it is never as dull as ditchwater. 溝中死水. My job is quite heavy, but I must say I've learnt a lot from it and have made lots of good contacts.

I have to keep myself updated all the time, because living and working in Tokyo is truly international. Tokyo is a very cosmopolitan 國際化 city and it's really a great place to train up newcomers.

Recently I got myself involved in a ninety-thousand-dollar project promoting a portfolio. Sure there were sleepless nights when planning for it. Yet I'm more excited and happier than I used to be. And how about you? How about your job?

Remember, all work and no play will make your life deadly boring!

Best Wishes,
Akio

been our inability to find a highly motivated 激勵 agent to promote our products.

So we find it hard to gain market share here. Yet the intensively competitive pressure 激烈競爭壓力 of the trade is favorable.有利的

An article which appeared in last week's Press Technology Weekly praised the automatic color press highly. That sounds good for us. All for now. I hope you have a great success in your field.

Questions 186-190 refer to the following reports.

Japanese adults by the hundreds of thousands — young and old — are going to classrooms across the islands to pursue new goals and fulfillment in life. Adults are now the fastest-growing segment of Japanese education and are likely to remain so for years to come. In 2007, about 5 million adult Japanese were attending school or college part time. Today the total comes to almost 9 million enrolled in instructional programs at college campuses, community centers, cram schools and medical centers. Classes adults are taking courses including sculpturing, painting, yoga relaxation, bird-watching, classical-music appreciation, photography, dancing and weaving. What educators are discovering is that many adults come back to school not just to fill time, or learn a job or hobby, but to enlarge their understanding of themselves, their lives and their relationship to the world around them.

Specialists find that 3 out of every 7 people in our country are relaxing — away from paid jobs — in painting, performing music, weaving, wood carving and other hobbies. There are also estimates that about 10 percent of homes have ardent 熱衷 amateur gardeners who take care of greenery from house plants to large vegetable gardens. Two percent collect stamps and about 30 thousand are amateur photographers. One of the main reasons for the prosperity 繁榮, observers say, is that our contemporary countrymen feel a deep need to escape 逃離 the routine of their jobs. In leisure time, they turn to hobbies for a kind of individual self-expression and relaxation. For example, social psychologists say, most people choose hobbies in which at least a small amount of physical labor is involved. They also choose hobbies which provide immediate evidence of results. Such activities often are in contrast to their jobs, which involve many other people, no single one of whom can point to a product and say, "That was made entirely by me." 190. What is NOT mentioned as a reason for people choosing hobbies?
