Unit 5 Travel

■ Air travel

When you arrive at the airport, take your baggage/luggage, ticket, and identification to the check-in desk. Passengers who only have a carry-on bag can also check in online or on computers at the airport. Then proceed through security to the boarding gate. Check the information boards to see if your flight is delayed or how long of a layover you may have. As you board your plane, a member of the cabin crew will check your boarding pass and direct you to the correct aisle and seat. When you arrive at your destination, pick up you baggage from the carousel. If your flight is international, you will go through customs and passport control. If you have crossed several time zones, you may suffer from jetlag when you arrive.

■ Business trip

Usually a business trip is less stressful if the traveler knows something about the destination before making the journey and has a well-planned itinerary. During periods when there are exhibitions or conferences, all kinds of accommodations, from expensive hotels to lower-priced guesthouses, can fill up quickly. When there are not many vacancies, hotel receptionists will not accept bookings unless they get last-minute cancellations. So company representatives traveling on business trips should reserve their hotel rooms ahead of time. Fortunately, most hotels publish brochures, either online or in paper form, advertising the facilities and amenities available. These amenities may include such things as the availability of a gym or swimming pool, and complimentary meals. The hotel may provide courtesy transportation. In case it doesn't, a traveler should have some local currency available to pay for the taxi fare. Before registering at a hotel, travelers should pay attention to this information if they don't want to be disappointed.

Dining out

Some business people dine out as part of their jobs to entertain clients and discuss projects. Sometimes they go for a buffet lunch or on a special occasion they might have a three-course dinner that includes an appetizer or starter, a main course or entree, and a dessert. Beverages are served with the meal. The menu tells you the food that is offered and the price of each dish. Places to dine vary from restaurants where a host/hostess will greet you, to self-service cafeterias. However, all quality restaurants will provide waiter service. A good waiter or waitress will make recommendations about the choice of dishes and drinks. At the end of the meal, it is normal in many countries for diners to include a tip for the service, in addition to the amount of the check for the meal itself.
